

Can industrial land be forcibly acquired and stored by the government

Land Acquisition Rules: With the expansion of infrastructure and industrial projects across the country, land acquisition has become a very sensitive issue. In such a situation, the ...

Process The procedures of compulsory land acquisition can be divided into 3 stages: pre-acquisition stage, acquisition stage and post-acquisition stage. In the pre-acquisition stage, private persons can ...

This can leave the land vulnerable to outside commercial interests, so communities may seek to formalize their land rights in a government registry and obtain an official land document. ...

Congress today accused Essar Group of forcibly acquiring farmland and grazing fields in Gujarat's Devbhomi Dwarka district in collusion with the BJP government in the state, a charge ...

China's economy has a typical characteristic that the government has a strong control of enormous productive resources, such as the land resources. Industrial land use is greatly ...

Regardless of the label, compulsory acquisition is a critical development tool for governments, and for ensuring that land is available when needed for essential infrastructure--a contingency that land ...

Industrial land-use regulations (ILURs) are important policy instruments used by local governments in China to remedy the side effects of industrial production and to protect scarce land. In ...

The key finding is that the governance structure in industrial land use is an organizational structure composed of the central government, local government and the market, and ...

A policy of land acquisition by the state for corporations without proper safeguards may ultimately thwart the very process of development. Incentivising private corporations with heavily ...

A taking occurs when the government seizes private property for public use. It may be a physical taking, where the government occupies or acquires the property, or a regulatory taking, where government ...

Background In this case, Vidya Devi was the owner of about 3.34 hectares of land in the northern state of Himachal Pradesh. The state of Himachal Pradesh (the respondent in the case) forcibly acquired ...

Can industrial land be forcibly acquired and stored by the government

Can industrial land be forcibly acquired and stored by the government

