Which Glashütte Original watches are hand-wound?

Most of our readers might now be familiar with two emblematic watches from Glashütte Original, the PanoInverse and PanoMaticInverse. Both watches, hand-wound for the first and automatic for the latter, with inverted movements showing everything technical right on their dials.

What's new with Glashütte Original 'panolunarinverse'?

Glashütte Original updates its inverted watch with a greatly integrated moon display, and loads of textures, revealing the PanoLunarInverse.

What time does a Glashütte Panorama date come out?

At 4 o'clock, Glashütte Original's signature Panorama Date features two concentric date discs with white numerals against a matt blue ground, ensuring exceptional legibility at a glance.

Why should you buy a moonphase watch?

Precision diamond milling ensures a sharp profile, beautifully contrasted against the galvanic blue night sky. A fine-toothed gear ensures the exceptional accuracy of the moonphase display: once correctly set, and provided the watch runs continuously, it will not require manual adjustment for the next 122 years.

Does go have a moon phase display?
